Subject: Psychological Warfare

1. Draft report of SWNCC ad hoc Committee circulated to the Advisory Council for written comments is believed satisfactory except where the term "National Intelligence Authority" is referred to in connection with psychological warfare activities. It is believed preferable that the Conclusions, par 4 d should read: "The Central Intelligence Group of the National Intelligence Authority . . .". This change would improve the report and more nearly specify the active interest of National Intelligence in the conduct of psychological warfare. Any implementation of psychological warfare pertaining to Intelligence would be undertaken by the Central Intelligence Group under policies established by the National Intelligence Authority in concert with SWNCC and JCS.

REMARKS: Subject: Psychological Warfare

- 1. The SWNCC ad hoc Committee for Psychological Warfare, established to study the provisions of SWNCC 304, and to which I was designated as an observer for CIG, held its final meeting on Tuesday, 3 December, and it approved the attached report for submission to SWNCC.
- 2. The recommendations of the Committee include approval by SWNCC subject to the concurrence of NIA and JCS. It may, therefore, be expected that some changes will be incorporated in the paper before it is received in CIG.
- 3. In general the report recognizes the interest of the National Intelligence Authority in the production of intelligence, both in preparation for psychological warfare and in the results obtained and in the conduct of clandestine operations. A permanent subcommittee of SWNCC is recommended with CIG membership. The charter of this committee is contained in Appendix "A" (pages 3 and 4).

9. Comment

PACTS BEARING ON THE PROBLEM

- The United States organization for psychological warfare in World War II was affected by the following developments:
  - a. Il July 1941. The Office of Coordinator of Information (COI) was established by Presidential Order to collect, analyse, and correlate information and data bearing on national security, to make such data available to the President and such other officials as determined by the President, and to perform related activities. COI commenced operations on the premise that this agency would not only coordinate all incoming information, but also information flowing from the United States to the rest of the world. The Foreign Information Service was organised as a separate branch of COI, was situated in New York City, and was charged with the responsibility of coordinating international broadcasting from this country.
  - b. 30 July 1941. The Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs (CIAA) was created by Executive Order. This office was an outgrowth of the Office for Coordination of Commercial and Cultural Relations between the American Republics, created by the Council of National Defense on 16 August 1940. CIAA was assigned broad functions as coordination center of commercial and cultural relations with other American republics, and was responsible for furthering commercial and economic well-being in the Western Hemisphere.
  - e. 50 July 1941. The Board of Economic Warfare (REW) was established (originally as the Economic Defense Board) by Executive Order for the purpose of developing and economic policies, plans, and programs designed to protect and strengthen the international economic relations of the United States in the interest of national defense. (Eventually REW was consolidated into the Foreign Economic Administration).
  - d. 26 October 1941. The Office of Facts and Figures (OFF) was created by Executive Order for the purpose of facilitating dissemination of factual information to the citizens of this country on the progress of defense efforts and on the defense policy and activities of the government.
  - 5 March 1942. The Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) created (in JCS 12) the Joint Psychological Warfare Committee (JPWC) which was envisaged as the ultimate authority over both foreign propaganda and foreign secret (subversive) operations. (This committee's functions later were absorbed by other agencies.)

- f. 15 June 1942. The Office of War Information (OWI) was established by Executive Order of the President for the purpose of coordinating into one agency war information functions of the government---foreign and domestic. The Executive Order brought the Office of Facts and Figures (OFF) into the new agency, and abolished the Office of Coordinator of Information (COI), exclusive of the Foreign Information Service which was transferred to OWI.
- g. 15 June 1942. The Office of Strategic Services (OSS) was established by Military Order under the jurisdiction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for the purpose of collecting and analyzing such strategic information as required by the Joint Chiefs of Staff for military operations in planning and in conducting special operations not assigned to other government agencies.
- h. 22 February 1945. The Director of OSS sent to the Joint Chiefs of Staff a memorandum enclosing the first "overall strategic plan for United States psychological warfare." This memorandum became JCS 230 dated 1 March 1945. (Certain provisions of the memorandum having to do with the functions of OSS were approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff in JCS 155/11/D on 27 Detober 1945.)
- i. R March 1945. The Joint Chiefs of Staff approved the first basic plan for psychological warfare prepared by OSS. (Basic Plan for Psychological Warfare in Italy, contained in JGS 189/2).
- i. 10 March 1945. The President issued the following clarifying order with respect to the responsibilities of ONI and OSS:

all phases of the federal program of radio, press, publication, and related foreign propaganda activities involving the dissemination of information. The program for fereign propaganda in areas of actual or projected military operations will be coordinated with military plans through the planning agencies of the War and Navy Departments, and shall be subject to the approval of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Parts of the fereign propaganda program which are to be executed in a theater of military operations will be subject to the control of the theater commander. The authority, functions, and duties of the Office of War Information shall not extend to the Western Hemisphere, exclusive of the United States and Canada.

"The military order of June 15, 1942, establishing the Office of Strategic Services, is hereby modified to the extent necessary to make this order effective."

Approved For Release 2006/03/17 : GIA-RDP80R01731R00360 (1000)

ke 17 March 1943. The Joint Chiefs of Staff authorized limison officers for the War and Mavy Departments with duties as follows:

To sit as members of the Overseas Planning Group of the OWI.

To maintain contact with all planning agencies of the JCS and to furnish the Overseas Planning Group of the Office of War Information with as much of JCS plans as authorized by Joint Security Control (an agency of the Joint Chiefs of Staff), and as necessary to insure correlation between military and propaganda plans.

To transmit requests from JCS to OWI relative to propaganda activities desired for the purpose of furthering military operations.

To present to the JCS all basic and such propagands plans which required their approval.

- 1. 27 October 1943. In JCS 155/11/D, Joint Security Control was charged with direction of the timing of the strategic service measures initiated from the United States by the OSS.
- m. 4 December 1944. In JGS 1178/1, Joint Security Control was directed to bring to the attention of the Joint Chiefs of Staff limison officers with CMI such JGS papers as were likely to be of interest to CMI.
- The foregoing directives, in their successive steps, formulated the government's pelicy with respect to information and foreign propaganda, and established organizations designed to provide for coordinated planning and implementation of foreign propaganda and foreign secret (subversive) operations. With respect to information, various governmental agencies operated to inform the United States public of our progress in the war. These agencies were subject to voluntary consorship and to cable and postal consorship. With regard to foreign propaganda and foreign secret (subversive) operations, governmental organizations operated to overcome the enemy's will to fight and to sustain the morale of friendly groups in scuntries occupied by the enemy. In addition, there was an attempt, divided between information and propaganda agencies, to improve the morale of friendly countries and the attitudes of neutral countries toward the United States.
- 5. Foreign propaganda and foreign secret (subversive) operations were directed so as to discredit the enemy's government and leaders, to stimulate hatred between dissident enemy persons and groups, to persuade the enemy military and enemy civilian population of the hopelessness of their situation, and to meet the enemy prepaganda with counter-propaganda. These tasks were accomplished by "white" propaganda and "black" measures. In general, "white" propaganda was overt---issued from reputable, known U. S. official or other sources, or from countries known to be friendly to the United States, and implemented by radio, leaflets, pemphlets, and senic means. "Black" measures were covert---apparently conducted by forces friendly to the enemy or by subversive forces within enemy territory, and implemented by radio "freedom" stations, false rumors, false leaflets or documents, fifth column activities, sabotage, guerilla warfare, and support of underground resistance groups.

- 4. Directives outlined in paragraph 1 above eventually resulted in the following procedure (also shown on chart, Annex"A") within the organizations dealing with phases of psychological warfare:
  - As Whites. The Director of the Office of War Information (OWI), in planning and executing the federal program on overseas propaganda, had an Overseas Planning Board, on which were represented OWI, the State Department, and Limison officers of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. CIAA and the British Pelitical Warfare Commission were represented by observers, for purposes of information and coordination. This beard, following the general structure of an everall plan approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, prepared a weekly Central Directive for overseas propaganda which was cleared through agencies of the State Department and the Joint Chiefs of Staff. These directives (and other supporting ones) were transmitted to OWI offices and to major psychological warfare agencies in military commands abroad as the established U. S. government propaganda policy. In London, a combined directive was worked out by U. S. and British foreign propaganda agencies to govern all combined European theater propaganda operations.
  - b. "Black". The Director of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) had a Planning Group, on which were represented OSS, the State Department, and the Bar and Havy Departments. An Advisory Committee served with the OSS Planning Group to consider matters affecting the respective agencies represented on the essmittee. Representatives on the Advisory Committee were from the Office of Economic Warfare, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Treasury Department or other appropriate agencies. The Planning Group, following the general directives flowing from an everall plan approved by the Joint Chiefe of Staff, prepared frequent directives for eversess operations, the timing of which was under the direction of a Joint Chiefe of Staff agency, Joint Security Control. These directives were committed to OSS agencies oversess as the established U. S. policy for secret operations.
  - 4. Goordination between OSS and ONI was on a basis of informal cooperation.

    Approval of OSS and ONI plans for military theaters of operation or projected eperations was vested in the Joint Chiefs of Staff. In military theaters, secrdination was conducted through the normal military command channels.

- d. The army and Navy conducted psychological warfare operations, partially through OSS and OWI agencies, and partially through their own erganizations. Considerable cooperation was extended by the armed services to OSS and OWI in the transfer overseas of equipment and personnel and in the discharge of other administrative tasks.
- The CIAA operated semi-independently, with "information" measures designed to impreve economic and commercial interest between the United States and the countries of Central and South America.
- 5. The fellowing problems with respect to psychological warfare existed at the ead of World War II:
  - the Mashington level remained on a basis of informal ecoperation, which did not always result in coordination.
  - b. The national psychological organization was such that there was duplication of effort, competition for available supplies of personnel, slow and limited coordination and integration into the major military, political and economic programs of the government.
  - 2. Directives overseas were subject to delays in transmission which eften negated their use.
  - 4. Military theater commanders received psychological warfare directives from OSS or OWI.

DISCUSSION

- 6. Examination has been conducted by the ad hoc Committee of World War II CoCoSo, J.CoSo, and J.P.S. papers; executive and other orders of the President; reports from military commanders and their staffs; and personnel with experience in World War II psychological warfare activities. It was noted during the examination that all major nations participating in World War II made use of psychological warfare at various stages and in varied techniques, and in numerous instances psychological warfare contributed toward strategie and tactical victories. Detailed appraisal of psychological warfare results and future application of techniques will require further and continuous study, including as source material the comprehensive World war II history on the subject which is now under preparation by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.
- 7. Delays in the organization for and in the application of psychological warfare during World War II resulted in large part from different interpretations of terminology, pp. 2004 of terminology, pp. 2004 of terminology, pp. 2004 of terminology, preparange and 2004 of terminology, preparange and 2004 of terminology, preparange and 2004 of terminology, pp. 2004 of term

SPORET

"white", and "black" measures apparently were not sufficiently definitive to permit elear presentation or prompt approval of plans and implementing measures. The following definitions are therefore presented as a basis for present discussion, conclusions, and recommendations:

- a. Psychological warfare. The planned use, during time of war, or threat of war, of all measures exclusive of armed conflict, designed to influence the thought, morals, or behavior of a given foreign group in such a way as to support the accomplishment of our military or national aims, with the following objectives: to assist in overcoming an enemy's will to fight; to sustain the morals of friendly groups in countries occupied by the enemy; and to improve the morals of friendly countries and the attitudes of neutral countries toward the United States.
- b. Information. Dissemination of complete factual information on subjects of interest in order to promote the functioning of man's reason.
- g. Propaganda. Dissemination of information on subjects of interest, prepared with the intent of persuading, and of dominating man's reason. The information is normally factual, but not necessarily complete.
- d. "White" propaganda. Overt propaganda, issued from reputable, known U. S. official or other sources, or from countries known to be fliendly to the U. S. "White" propaganda may be implemented by press, radio, leaflets, pamphlets, and voice.
- g. "Black" measures. Covert measures, apparently conducted by forces friendly to the enemy or by subversive forces within enemy territory. These may be implemented by radio "freedom" stations, false rumors, false leaflets and documents, fifth celumn activities, sabotage, guerilla warfare, and support of underground resistance groups.
- 8. United States psychological warfare has a history of improvisation, without central leadership, control or integration with other methods of attaining maticial objectives. Initial U.S. psychological warfare efforts in World War II suffered because there was no organisation prior to the onset of shooting war for coordinated advance planning, training of personnel, or perfection of techniques.
- 9. In analyzing factors bearing on the formation of such an organization, the following have been taken into account:
  - a. The four instruments for making national policy effective in the international field consist of diplomacy (negotiation and bergaining among governmental representatives), economic bargaining and pressure, the threat or employment of armed force, information and propagands. For maximum effect, information and propaganda must be applied with action in the other three fields. Maximum effectiveness in the management of foreign relations can only be achieved if all four foregoing instruments are used in a planned and coordinated fashion. It is necessary for those in charge of planning, coordination and execution to be aware of the capabilities and limitations of the various techniques offered by all four elements. In time of war, the use of these elements is determined by the war situation and they become instruments of warfare.

- b. Three phases in international relations apply with respect to United States foreign policy:
  - (1) Time of peace with varying degrees of international tension. During this phase the major U. S. emphasis is on the basis of information; i.e., the explanation and justification of United States foreign policy, a description of America's peaceful pursuits, her matural resources, her industrial and agricultural organisation and potentialities, and her scientific and cultural activities and achievements.
  - (2) Time of international crisis but juridical peace.

This phase appears if and when international relations between the United States and other powers develop to the point where strong political economic and military pressure may be required to effectuate American foreign policy. It is generally signaled by an act of the President, or of the Congress, or both, or the announcement of a pelicy to take immediate military action in defense of U. S. mationals against possible foreign aggression. The major emphasis shifts from a purely informational and cultural program to greater reliance upon tactics and propaganda more appropriate to the measures designed to influence a foreign state to not in conformity with the requirements of our foreign policy (which measures usually are designated as "political warfare.")

(5) Time of Har.

This phase is characterised by employment of all psychological warfare activities (including political and conomic), involving channels and media for dissemination of psychological warfare as adjuncts to military operations or projected operations.

The existing peacetime organizations within the governmental structure which are charged with information responsibilities and which might be charged. at least in part, into a wartime organisation for psychological warfare.

- d. Personnel in the foregoing organizations who have experience in psychological warfare and who might be assigned to positions within the wartime organisation.
- In the development of an organization for wartine preparedness in 10. psychological warfare, the following factors are considered fundamental:
  - The State Department has primary interest in the political (and economic) aspects.
  - The armed services have a vital interest in those aspects affecting mational security and military operations.
  - Other appropriate agencies of the government should be required to assist in planning and implementation of psychological warfare.
  - Goordination of "white" and "black" psychological warfare is a mecessity in any national effort.
  - Procedure finally developed during World War II in the planning and implementing of psychological warfare should be used initially as a basis for future wartime organization and procedure, with such minor administrative modifications as appeared desirable at the close of the war.
  - u.
  - Recommendation is made that a sub-committee of SWHCC be created as:

    A peacetime plantage agency charged with the responsibility for all mecessary measures, including firm plans for wartime organisation, that will place psychological warfare in readiness for wartime implementation.
  - b. An agency which, in the absence of any other agency, can be utilised for coordinating implementation of approved psychological warfare plans in any war emergency which might suddenly arise.
  - An agency which may either continue as the plans and policy mucleus of a wartime organization or may serve to lend continuous, planned effort to psychological warfare during the transition to a wartime organization of different structure.
  - Membership of the peacetime sub-occumittee for psychological warfare is 12. recommended on a basis of those governmental agencies having primary or wital interest in the subject, namely, representation from the State, War, and Navy Departments, and the Central Intelligence Group. The latter agency is included in order that the committee can be supplied with evaluated intelligence concerning target nations and nationals, and in addition, because the Central Intelligence Group appears to be the one existing agency of the government must fitted to deside "black" psychological warfare measures.

- 15. The fellowing tasks are visualised for a peacetime psychological warfare committee:
  - a. Satablishment of definitions, responsibilities and functions for "white" and "black" psychological warfare.
    - b. Plans to be prepared for use in time of war.
    - (1) "Strategie" psychological warfare plans, to be directed at petential enemy, enemy-occupied, neutral and friendly nations.
    - (2) "Tastical," or combat, psychological warfare plans, to be directed against armed forces of potential enemies.
    - (8) Counter-propaganda plans, determined from an analysis of peacetime and wartime propaganda of potential enemies.
      - (4) Consolidation, for areas occupied by U. S. forces.
    - (5) Information control activities for occupied, hostile areas.

      Plans moted in sub-paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), preceding, should be formulated for periods when the United States is on the defensive, when a stalemate exists, and when the U. S. is on the offensive; and also, measures which may be combined with possible Allies. It is considered that plans should be concentrated against the major vulnerable target of a potential enemy and that plans for subsidiary vulnerable targets should be integrated with plans against the key target.

e. Personnel.

- (1) Selection on an inter-departmental basis of personnel for wartime assignment.
  - (2) Formulation of training and familiarisation courses.

In the selection and enrellment of personnel, provisions should be made for waiving physical or age restrictions in the cases of those skilled or trained in psychological warfare. In addition, it is considered necessary to examine the integration into the military organisation of such personnel as may be assigned to military theaters of operation. In this latter problem, cognisance should be taken of World War II experience, in which this proved to be a continuing source of difficulty. Between military and civilian personnel serving in the field, problems of pay differentials, standards of responsibility, discipline and privileges were such as to lead those military commands who experienced these difficulties to recommend integration of civilian personnel into the military chain of command. This procedure, it was pointed out, was successful in several branches of the services which required speedy mobilisation of technicians in large numbers, some of whom were draft-exempt for physical or ether remsons. In planning for recruitment of psychological warfare personnel, it has been suggested that qualified volunteers and draft-exempt individuals be permitted to enlist specifically for psychological warfare, with assured rating as non-commissioned officers, or in the case of qualified personnel, as officers.

d. Techniques.

- (1) Study of World War II techniques, including distribution of leaflets by aircraft; distribution of leaflets by guns; operation of radio stations, fixed and mobile, use of loud speakers in tactical situations, and use of DOWs in surrender appears and general propagate.
- (2) Development of new techniques applicable to possible new types of warfare.
- (8) Organization and operations of psychological warfare combat teams, and other psychological warfare operating agencies, including recommendations for changes in organization and material.
- e. Communications. Provision for rapid and secure communications between Washington and overseas operating centers.

Lack of rapid transmission during World War II often resulted in receipt of psychological warfare directives after events had overtaken their contents. Provision of rapid and secure communications to remedy this situation is considered of such importance that a separate radio for psychological warfare communications is indicated.

f. Intelligence.

Development of an intelligence procedure to insure that intelligence research at home and overseas is made available in time and sufficiency so that sound psychological warfare plans and operational decisions can be made.

g. Wartime Organisation. The ad hoc Committee is of the opinion that it is premature to attempt a complete blue-print of a wartime psychological warfare organisation. If its recommendations for the peacetime organisation are adopted, it would be a function of the peacetime sub-committee to work on the problem of a wartime organisation at length and in detail. The ad hoc Committee has indicated the framework and basis for a wartime organization in its recommendations for the peacetime organization (Appendix "A"). Any change in the composition or functions of this organisation to conform to possible future changes in the structure of governmental departments or agencies should be based on the principles of: integration with political policy and action, and with military plans and operations, both on the policy and operating levels; and coordination of "white" and "black" psychological warfare measures. Discussions by the ad hos Committee developed the following factors for consideration by the peacetime sub-committee recommended in Appendix "A".

Thereafter, a "white" sub-committee and "black" sub-committee to draft regular directives based within the framework of the long-term plans and taking account of the developments of military campaigns, or political policies, and of foreseeable events requiring special handling.

These directives to be approved by a Joint Chiefs of Staff agency in order to insure that they assist in and not interfere with current military operations.

Directives to be transmitted by angid communications, by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to military theater commanders; by the State Department to its missions and to the Federal agencies concerned.

Provisions to be made to capitalize in a controlled, directed, and rapid manner on sudden military or political developments which had not been foreseen either as to scope, effect, or timing.

- (2) Military Theater Organization. Chart of a proposed wartime organization for military theaters is attached (Annex *C*), based on developments in the major U. S. Military theaters of World War II. Experience in these theaters demonstrated that while psychological warfare originally had been assigned to various staff sections for development and implementation, the diversity of the operations were such that effective use of psychological warfare as an auxiliary operational weapon required that responsibilities for psychological warfare be established in a separate staff section.
- h. Fiscal problems in connection with a peacetime and watine psychological warfare organization.
- developing a policy that will provide, so far as practicable, continuous coordination in the story of the war told to enemy, neutral, and home populations. Since overseas operations are a part of the major national and military and political operation, release of information concerning overseas operations requires facilities for a constant balance with psychological warfare. A policy to establish such a balance involves close coordination between psychological warfare, security and consorable agencies, together with facilities for briefing overseas press and radio representatives and control of their current communications outside the theaters.
- 14. Recommendation is made that in view of the scope of exploratory and definitive work confronting a peacetime psychological warfare committee, members on this committee should be assigned no other duties and should be provided with a permanent secretariat.
